Dear Sir:

Applicant herein replies to the Examiner's Answer dated June 3, 2004.

I. Section 5 of Examiner's Answer

Section 5 of the Examiner's Answer addresses Applicant's summary of the invention.

Applicant notes that the Examiner admitted the summary to be "generally correct." The relevance of the Examiner's admission is explained below in part III.

II. Section 6 of Examiner's Answer

Section 6 of the Examiner's Answer addresses the issue on appeal. The Examiner agrees with Applicant's statement of the issue but then articulates a different issue. Applicant contends the issue on appeal is whether the Examiner had the authority to reconsider the Board's new rejection; the Examiner indicates the issue is whether the claims are definite.

III. Section 10 of Examiner's Answer

Section 10 of the Examiner's Answer contains the response to Applicant's arguments. The response indicates that the Examiner has reconsidered the rejection raised by the Board. (Answer at p. 4, part A, B.) In doing so, the Examiner appears to have acquiesced to Applicant's argument favoring the Examiner's authority to reconsider the Board's rejection. As a result, the Examiner has resolved the appealed issue in Applicant's favor.

Nevertheless, Applicant contends additional indications from the Examiner warrant further action from the Board. Specifically, although the Examiner claims to have reconsidered the §112, ¶2 rejection, nothing in the Answer demonstrates such reconsideration. The Answer's Section 10 primarily contains unsupported announcements concerning (1) reconsideration and evaluation (id at parts A and B); (2) disagreement with Applicant's arguments (id at part E); (3) retention of previous positions (id at part D); and (4) conclusions that the claims are indefinite (id at parts A, B, D, and E). The Answer's "reconsideration" also fails to address the additional fact that the ordinary artisan would gain further support for definiteness from the Specification. Applicant specifically cited such support at p. 9 of the Appeal Brief and in the Summary of the Invention, which the Examiner has now admitted to be correct (Answer at p. 3, part 5).

Further, nothing in the rest of prosecution history demonstrates the Examiner's reconsideration of the §112, ¶2 rejection. The Examiner has had two chances to timely reconsider the §112, ¶2 rejection – in the Office Action dated 11/14/03 and the Advisory Action dated 12/29/03 – yet instead chose to deny the authority to reconsider. The sole instance of the Examiner setting forth substantive §112, ¶2 arguments occurs in an untimely Office Action (dated 3/11/04 -- after the Notice of Appeal) that merely parrots the Board's decision dated 7/29/03. Such "reconsideration" fails to address the facts that (1) the Board's dictionary citation does not support the Board's argument; and (2) the Board's dictionary, at least one other dictionary, other references (all of which would be known to one of ordinary skill in the art), and the Specification support definiteness. (See Appeal Brief at p. 5-9.)

At this late date, the Examiner's continued failure to actually reconsider the §112, ¶2 rejection, even after finally acknowledging the authority to do so, favors the Board's addressing the §112, ¶2 issue rather than remanding to the Examiner. Applicant previously raised this contention in the Appeal Brief (p. 5-9), citing prosecution economy/efficiency. The Examiner attempted to address this in the Answer by arguing that prosecution economy does not override the statutory requirement for definiteness. (Answer at p. 4, part 10(C).) Applicant contends that, for the reasons just stated, prosecution economy favors the Board overriding the Examiner; and the arguments presented in the Appeal Brief favor the Board overriding the indefiniteness rejection.

IV. Conclusion

The Answer indicates agreement with Applicant that the Examiner had the authority to reconsider the Board's §112, ¶2 rejection. The Answer also concludes that the claims are indefinite but offers no supporting arguments. A review of prosecution history demonstrates that at no time has the Examiner actually reconsidered the Board's §112, ¶2 rejection; rather, the Examiner has merely repeatedly avoided reconsideration, repeated the Board's rejection, and repeated the bare conclusion of indefiniteness. Applicant submits that the facts and arguments presented previously and above support a finding of definiteness, as does the Examiner's admission concerning support in the Specification. In addition, prosecution economy and efficiency favor the Board (rather than the Examiner) considering such arguments, withdrawing the §112 rejection, and addressing the §102 rejection. Still further, the arguments presented in the Appeal Brief from two years ago support the novelty of the claims, thereby favoring the Board's withdrawal of the §102 rejection as well. Accordingly, Applicant respectfully requests that the Board withdraw all rejections.

Respectfully submitted,

Charles Brantley
